M. M. Docket-93-48.

Dear Communications-

I'm a parent & Grandma from a very good family - And I don't like the violence & sex on the T.V. Shows.

I don't watch a lot of them myself because of it. It's disgusting
It's really bad. disgusting

I've talked to two young men - not married in their 40's & they said they don't watch a lot of the shows themselves - (it's bad)

I'm writing to some sponsors & telling them that I no longer buying their products if they sponsor these programs of sex & violence.

I am being declared still born. I know this to be a fact. I have been following the HDTV developments for ten years as publisher and editor of the HDTV Newsletter. I have written extensively in numerous magazines, sponsored and programmed 4 major world conferences on HDTV. The question of spectrum auction was only made possible by the HDTV initiative. Without it there would have been and still would not be any reason for broadcasters to convert to digital. Without there being a quality option for the public, there is no reason to move to new equipment or set top boxes. The idea of transition to digital should be dropped if there is going to be an auction. No broadcasters will agree to spend that amount of money and then do HDTV pioneering. That is too much to ask of anyone, regardless of the depth of their pockets. This position that is taken by this group is simply a poorly thought through one and should be dismissed as anti-business if not anti-American.

Of course, we could have the auction and the highest bidder would win. That bidder may not have any idea of providing a public broadcast service, no mandate of specific services being made for the high bidder. The high bidder does with the spectrum as the marketplace decides and they generate the demand or the marketplace. Sorry. bad idea, Bad view on how thin. You had just as well sell mounth Rushmore, The Capitol building in Washington, the Library of Congress and a few other "American Asssets" if we are so hard up! There is no tax, no fee, no fine, no expense of any business that is not passed on to the end user! Period! Otherwise that business fails!

I am writing to encourage you to implement legislation that would require network TV to increase the amount of quality educational television programming during after school and early evening hours. I am a Registered Nurse and high school health education teacher who is profoundly concerned about the amount of mindless, violent TV which our children grow up watching.

Please do your best to provide them with some healthy, stimulating alternatives. Our children, our country, and our world will be better for it.
